

Patient Oriented

Individuals, families, and communities play an essential, equal and meaningful role as shared decision makers in all aspects of patient-oriented research and SCPOR governance.

Patient-Oriented

Collaborative

Collaborative

SCPOR values the contributions of diverse stakeholders and their roles in advancing a common vision of improving the health of Saskatchewan people. Strong research partnerships are developed through a foundation of trust, mutual respect, transparency, and shared accountability.

Responsive

SCPOR focuses on what matters most to individuals, families, and communities.

It is forward-looking, adaptable, accountable, and action-oriented.

SCPOR supports transformative research that addresses the current and evolving needs of Saskatchewan's people in a timely manner.

Capacity Building

Capacity Building

SCPOR provides support and education that enhance competencies and skills to bridge research and community engagement and influence a strong patient-oriented research culture in Saskatchewan.

Continuous Improvement

SCPOR pursues new ways to improve the health and wellbeing of Saskatchewan people and supports Learning Health System approaches by bringing together the expertise of all research partners. This enables cycles of continuous learning and improvement that works to enhance patient and provider experiences, population health and health system performance.

Continuous Improvement

Innovative

Innovative

New knowledge and unique solutions are generated by research teams made up of many disciplines from different sectors that address the health and social needs of the population.

Equitable

Equitable

Health inequities and disparities are addressed by undertaking patient-oriented research in a respectful, culturally safe, and responsive way that results in improved health outcomes. In the spirit of reconciliation, the unique constitutional relationships with First Nations, Inuit and Métis peoples are recognized. Purposeful and authentic engagement of diverse and marginalized voices ensures the dignity and contributions of all.
